

ANDY & DENISE

Acoustic Singer Songwriters

Andy & Denise are excited to announce the release of their fourth studio CD, appropriately titled "Something New". This release is a perfect blend of all A&D are known for, from lush full productions to stripped down raw performances to captivating instrumentals. This joins their previous CDs, "Covers", "Go", and their debut release "Sunlight In Goodbye".

Hailing from the Eastern Panhandle of West Virginia, Andy & Denise are acoustic singer/songwriters who feature well crafted songs, compelling harmonies, and Andy's intricate guitar playing which often adds a third voice to their performances. They have been performing along the East coast for many years from small coffeehouse series to large festivals. Their songwriting has earned them a Finalist slot in the Plowshares Songwriting Contest in 2003 as well as multiple nods from the John Lennon Songwriting Contest. Their music has also been featured in various TV shows and independent films, and can be heard on numerous episodes of the Oprah Winfrey show.

When not touring, they use their combined talents to produce, record and mix their music as well as design their own packaging and website, proving to be truly independent artists. In addition to their own projects, they have produced and mixed many projects for other artists such as "Engine" by We're About 9, "God's Poet Now" by Erik Balkey, and "Another Tourist" by Eliot Bronson.

Andy Fox cut his teeth on the Boston music scene, playing in bands ranging from folk and blues to rock and ska while attending Berklee College of Music. He has released 2 instrumental acoustic guitar albums to date, with a third expected in 2009. Denise O'Brien moved to New York to pursue acting and has performed in numerous commercials, soaps and theater. She is also a fused glass artist under the name d'Pholk Designs.
